

A woodland walk, a hidden history

VISITING Carberry Hill

Queen Mary's Mount Carberry Hill East Lothian

Roe deer

Carberry Hill, once the home of the Elphinstone family is now owned and managed by the Buccleuch Estate.

The mature mixed woodlands are not just a great place for a walk, they are home to a host of birds and animals. Roe deer, foxes, magpies and green woodpeckers can all be seen if you go quietly. You will also find amazing views over Edinburgh, the Firth of Forth and much of Mid and East Lothian.

Carberry Hill also has a special place in Scottish history. The woods ring with the echoes of our Celtic ancestors and the defeat of Mary Queen of Scots. Work your way up the hill to the standing stone at the summit and learn more about why this place is so special.

You can visit Carberry Hill all year round. For more information, contact,

Mr Cameron Manson, Head Ranger,
Buccleuch Estates Ltd.
Dalkeith Estate,
Dalkeith,
Midlothian, EH22 2NA.
Tel: 0131 654 1666
Email: cmanson@buccleuch.com

Design and location photography: heather christie. Wildlife Photography: danielbridge.co.uk, Cameron Manson, ELGT

A woodland walk through history

Walks around Carberry Hill

Follow the signposts to enjoy a walk around this special place. Take time to look and listen for wildlife - you never know what you might see or hear. The paths can be muddy, so be sure to wear appropriate footwear.

Badger and blue tit

The commemorative stone at Queen Mary's Mount

