Council Buildings, 23 Court St, Haddington EH41 3HN

A COUNTY TOWN'S UNIQUE SCOTTISH HERITAGE

Ceremonies are held in The Adam Room within Haddington's former Sheriff Court dating from 1833.

The building occupies the site of the medieval Royal Palace of Haddington that existed from the 12th to the 13th century. It was located on King Street (now Court Street) in Haddington, and was the birthplace of King of Scots Alexander II in 1198 who reigned from 1214 to 1249.

The palace was also an occasional residence of his father William I (The Lion).

Today the building forms part of East Lothian Council's headquarters, though echoes of its historic past can be seen, and sensed, all around.

Dunbar Town House Museum & Gallery
High Street, Dunbar, EH42 1ER

A COASTAL TOWN'S RICH HISTORY

Searching for an interesting historical venue for your wedding? Forming part of one of the town's oldest buildings Dunbar Town House is renowned for its distinctive witches hat shaped tower and clock. It has presided over the administrative affairs of the town for over 400 years as the home of the town council, court room, jail, tourist information office, town library and most recently a museum and gallery.

Guests can enjoy the changing art and historical exhibitions on the ground floor before moving to the magnificent and historic wood panelled Council Chamber for the marriage or civil partnership ceremony.
